THE TIE THAT BINDS

by Dale Jenkins

We are annual people.

We use markers to remind us of things. Things like height, weight, and length all help us in this. - How far can you hit a golf ball? How far is it from here to Kentucky? How long have you been married? We celebrate birthdays, anniversaries, and milestones. We are annual people.

We are annual people.

God put us in this cycle: Days, weeks, months, years, decades, and life-spans. Therefore, in His design, we are brought to remember each week the giving of His own flesh and blood for our sin. This serves as a personal accountability judge as our response of living as He has designed is brought to memory. If He did what He did for me and thus saved me, my life must count for something worthwhile and I must rise above only living for self and sin to a higher level. It also calls me to remember His resurrection, for were He not raised, for all practical purposes His death would ultimately mean little more than that of any other martyr. We are annual people.

We are annual people.

All of that put in my mind and swished about, I cannot help but think that those early disciples were so anticipating the return of Jesus that one of them did, on the year anniversary of the resurrection, say "You know, it's been a year since Jesus overcame death for us all! What a Savior!" So, that said, even though we are commanded and do remember the Lord's Death, this day dubbed Easter by many is mighty special to me. To think that 1,987 years ago this Sunday, Jesus, in the event that changed all of history, sealed HIStory with the singularly most significant moment ever. He arose! We remember - then we celebrate!

SPRING MEADOWS YOUTH GROUP

Hello from a distance 6ft. away! Hope you all are still doing well. We want to welcome back Jessica and Jaret, our Summer Interns. Looking forward to having you both back with us.
