

Nebraska-based webinars address timely topics

The University of Nebraska Dairy Extension scheduled three fall webinars. Dates, topics and presenters are shown below.

October 13: Can a Weather Forecast Reduce Neighbor Odor Exposure?

11:00 a.m. Central time. No registration is required.

Join the webinar using this link: <https://unl.zoom.us/j/442896911>

Rick Koelsch, University of Nebraska-Lincoln biological systems engineering, will discuss reducing neighbor odor exposure.

November 10: Low Forage and Non-forage Fiber Feeding Strategies

11:00 a.m. Central time. No registration is required.

Join the webinar using this link: <https://unl.zoom.us/j/442896911>

Kirby Krogstad, University of Minnesota PhD student, will discuss the digestibility of pelleted distillers grain.

December 8: Feeding Strategies with Low Quality and Quantity Forages

11:00 a.m. Central time. No registration is required.

Join the webinar using this link: <https://unl.zoom.us/j/442896911>

Paul Kononoff, University of Nebraska-Lincoln dairy extension specialist, will discuss feeding strategies and recommendations when forage quality and quantity are limited.