Financial Stress at Work Is Hurting Employee Productivity

The ROI of Employee Financial Health

- Improved Productivity
- Improved Job Satisfaction
- Higher Retention
- Lower Absenteeism
- Reduced Health Insurance Costs

Employee who worries about the financial stability of their household for even a second, becomes more anxious, highly stressed, and feels diminished self-efficacy, and at all cognitive operations.

Survey Spotlight: 58% of working employees spend at least 5 hours per week worrying about their finances.

Financial Wellness at Work is Catching On, but Education is Not Enough

- 58% of employees said they felt a need for more comprehensive financial education, according to PwC.

How companies can invest in workplace wellness, reach out to your HR benefits provider, or contact us at info@cfsinnovation.org.

To learn more about employee financial health, check out CF SI’s report “Employee Financial Health: How Companies Can Invest in Workplace Wellness,” reach out to your HR benefits provider, or contact us at info@cfsinnovation.org.

5 Ways to Help Your Employees Engage with Financial Health Benefits

1. Talk to your team. Let them know the importance of financial health and the benefits and resources are needed.
2. Empowering the customer. Engage with your team to help them feel supported.
3. Fund your report. Continuously support employees with comprehensive, available resources, and add flexibility to your personal engagement.
4. Reduce risk. Ensure that employees have access to education and resources.
5. Empowerment. Send regular communications and engage employees across the range of activities about education and resources.

To learn more about employee financial health, check out CF SI’s report “Employee Financial Health: How Companies Can Invest in Workplace Wellness,” reach out to your HR benefits provider, or contact us at info@cfsinnovation.org.