Faith is sometimes called sight. As the natural eye cannot see the invisible, so the natural man cannot see the things of God. This needs supernatural sight. Reason cannot see the resurrection of the body, the life to come, and such things as the Word of God reveals to us. Nothing at all can be done in religion without a supernatural eye. A man may hear of heaven, forgiveness, and happiness, and think, 'Oh, these are good things,' but notwithstanding he does not see them with a supernatural eye. He does not see them as holy and gracious. He desires them under his own conditions, but not in altering his disposition. He sees heavenly things with a carnal eye, as Balaam wished to 'die the death of the righteous' (Num 23: 10). Faith is able to see things afar off because it sees things in the power of God, and in the truth and promises of God. Faith is wrought by the might power of God in the soul. It takes great power to turn away from riches, honours, and pleasures, and to stand and admire the things that it cannot see. For a man to rule the course of his life upon reasons the world cannot see, because of a happiness to come, and because of an unseen God he believes in: it is a mighty power that plants such a grace in the heart. Faith is wrought by the mighty power of God and thus faith lays hold upon the power of God that the promises shall be performed. This trust in the power and truth of God gives sight to faith. It is our duty to labour to have our faith clear, and to have this eye of faith giving us a strong sight. There are three evidences of strong sight: (1) When we have it, faith is able to see things afar off. (2) When there are clouds obscuring our hopes, faith's sight can pierce through them. (3) When there is little light with many obstacles, faith yet breaks through to see things remote! Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
