

Explore Dublin

Dublin is the capital city of the Republic of Ireland.

Dublin has all the amenities of a large city but with the feel of a large village.

Its centre is compact, walkable and vibrant while the wider metropolis is made of former villages that have been engulfed by Dublin's expansion while keeping their own character which adds to the larger city's temperament. Ireland is 1% evangelical, freshly post-Christian, increasingly secular and suspicious of religious dogma and institutions. A young city, 50% of Dublin is under 35 years old.

Our efforts must be rooted in Jesus and his gospel and the Spirit, not ourselves. We work out of grace versus into grace. While obedience is essential to being a disciple of Jesus, it must be critiqued according to the underlying motivations that generate our performance. Working in a culture that resists Christianity and the typical challenges of the work can a test of why we do what we do when it comes to the Great Commission.

Our strategy has been to see ourselves as gospel seed being planted into social networks around greater Dublin. Some of these networks are pre-existing and some are created by us. It is our goal to see the gospel demonstrated and articulated in palpable ways under the noses of non-believers. So we show up on their turf and articulate in ways that they can understand being an aroma of Jesus and His gospel. We constantly strive to go to meet them where they work, play, relax, think, laugh and cry, and live. We seek to embed ourselves into communities providing opportunity to relate to them on a repetitious basis to build trust and overcome the inbuilt suspicion they have of 'religion.' So repetitious relationship is a key element to our endeavours.
