HOW TO FIND REFRESHMENT IN THE MIDDLE OF THE SUMMER

By Sarah Bragg

Think back to what summer was like before you were a grownup. Do you remember the glory of it? Summers used to be about recharging. Taking time off from the daily grind in order to come back refreshed. I think the people who need refreshment the most are parents, yet it's sometimes most difficult for parents to find it. Instead, you find yourself just trying to hold on to your sanity as you try to figure out how to entertain your kids while school's out. You become a constant referee in sibling warfare and get lost in a never-ending state of laundry (How do they wear so many clothes?). And if you hear "I'm bored" one more time, you may lock yourself in a closet.

Summer comes and goes quickly. And much like a hurricane, your emotional, spiritual, and relational state of being can be tossed around and left in a state of destruction by the time school starts again. That's why it's important to think about how to safeguard your soul. Here's your challenge: . . .
