

Barbara Waite

Barb Waite is a native San Diegan, grateful for Christ's saving grace. At age nineteen, Barb's worldview had not developed much beyond the words of the 1950's popular hokey pokey song proclaiming, "that's what it's all about!" God stretched her thinking with a thought provoking answer from her future husband when she popped the question to him, "What would you want to do if you knew you had 24 hours to live?"

Barbara became a new creation in Christ Jesus not long after that. Newfound faith stretched her worldview and took her on a path far beyond putting her "right foot in and shaking it all about." Curt and Barbara served for 38 years on a small third world island. Although trained as a registered nurse, Barb learned how to teach her own four children, children's church, VBS, teen girls and Bible studies for women in prison.

Curt and Barbara have three grown sons living in Southern California and a daughter and her family in Malaysia. Since returning to California, Barbara has published two books and is working on a third. Barb and husband, Curt, are members of Tri-City Bible Church.
