Nurture Your Child's God-Given Talents

I love exploring my child's gifts and talents and characteristics. It's important that we spend time in prayer asking God for wisdom to best facilitate these gifts and talents.

Depending on your child's maturity level, help them work through their own calling from God within their world. Explain how God uses them to be a sweet friend to the new girl at school. Or how they share the love of Jesus when they stand up to a bully on the playground on behalf of another kid. It's neat to think and pray together about how God works in their lives at such a young age. If our child trusts us with their "big ideas" knowing that we won't let practicalities squelch their passion, they will see that their Father God is the ultimate safe place as well. When we seek after the Lord, knowing we can trust Him, we become more in tune to where He is moving in our lives. Our hearts become open to following that path which will be fruitful and fulfilling. Walking with our children in this lifelong process can be exciting

Ethan Harrelson 4-27

2 Things to Remember...

- Call if your child is not coming to AS
- Homework time is for assistance, not for the teacher to have one on one time with your child,

Field Trips for Spring Break!

Since TBCA is out the first week in April and the our public schools are out the third week of April, their field trips will be on different dates.

Look at the calendar so that you know what we are doing each day when your child is out of school. Also remember to pack a lunch daily and fill out the permission slip so your child may go on the field trip planned.

We will be Closed
on Good Friday
April 19th.

Easter Blessings
