HOME SCHOOL CO-OP WAIVER

By signing below our family agrees that we will not hold Redeemer Fellowship or any of its representatives (pastor, board members, communicants) liable for any property damage or bodily injury sustained during the group's use of the facilities. If any property damage occurs, compensation must be made by the group using the facility. If any injuries occur, then each individual's primary insurance will be responsible for the cost of immediate and long-term treatment. Either property damage or injury must be reported to Redeemer Fellowship's Administrative Assistant.

In addition, by signing below, our family understands that Redeemer Fellowship is allowing the use of its facilities in good faith that it will be left as it was found. That is, any of the rooms used (including the bathroom and kitchen facilities) will be left in the same manner in which they were found; all kitchen items used will be cleaned and put away, the bathrooms will be left clean, and any vacuuming or straightening up of rooms will be accomplished before the group leaves the facility.

We desire to open up this Home-School Co-Op to be a ministry to people within the church but also as an opportunity to serve the greater home-schooling community in Ocean and southern Monmouth County. Since people come from various backgrounds, we ask that each person who is committing to be a part of this co-op, along with the standard facilities and safety, review Redeemer's Constitution which can be found by copying the link below into a browser or going to our church website, and that in signing off on this waiver that you are committing to the Christian Conduct as outlined particularly in pages 17-18, realizing that this ministry will be led as a ministry of Redeemer Fellowship, so the Christian character should be in-line with that which is outlined in the constitution and as a ministry of the church falls under the leadership of the elders, also as outlined in the constitution.
