What is a metal detector pouch and why do I need one?

Metal detector pouches (or treasure pouches) are bags that are worn on or around your body (depending on the style of the particular pouch) while you are using your metal detector. They are generally divided into two sections, one of which is meant to hold your valuable finds, while the other is intended to carry any junk you dig up while treasure hunting. In addition to separating your treasure from your trash, they keep your hands free and your pockets open, and, when you have a treasure pouch, you never again have to carry around a cumbersome bag to hold your findings.

Additionally, when you're wearing a metal detector pouch, you're able to quickly stash away any valuables you find and keep them safely on your body. If you've ever had something fall out of your pocket while treasure hunting, or have lost small valuables amongst the junk you've picked up during your hunt, you can see why a pouch is valuable for anyone who uses a metal detector, and is most definitely an essential accessory.
