

"Some people say you know what happened to her."

Jimmy used to love photography, loved framing up the world through the lens of his Canon. But that was before everything happened.

Staring out at him from a missing-child poster is Jimmy's best friend. His mom, his therapist, even the sympathetic guidance counselor at his school can't get him to open up about Jen's disappearance. Or get him to talk about the blazing fire he started.

"I can take care of myself," Jen said again. She picked up her sunglasses and headed back towards the trailer park without him.

*Jimmy knows that even photos don't tell the truth.
Not the whole truth, anyway.*
