(New York) May 13, 2021 – Ailey Extension is heating things up with new virtual opportunities for kids and teens of all ages and experience levels. From now through August, students ages five to seventeen can get moving with special workshops designed to help them develop skills and boost confidence as they explore different movement styles. Each workshop creates a new opportunity for young dancers to learn and have fun in a welcoming environment surrounded by their peers.

First Ailey is inviting children ages 8-13 to join in the National Physical Fitness Month festivities by making dance part of their active lifestyle during a Kids & Teens West African Workshop with Sherece Donalds on Saturday, May 15 at 11am EDT. This upbeat class will focus on the fundamentals of traditional West African dance with an emphasis on helping young dancers understand the accompanying drum rhythms.

All teens who identify as male are invited to join in Earl Mosley’s Hearts of Men Workshop from Friday, May 21 – Sunday, May 23 as men ages 13-99 to come together to share life experiences through the power of movement in a safe space. Participants will build community during this three-day experience as they explore dance as a medium for conversation and healing. Throughout the weekend male dancers will experience a panel discussion among prominent artists and activists, share stories during an Improv Lab and performance workshop, take part in masterclasses with acclaimed choreographers, and make time for reflection. Students are strongly encouraged to make this a family affair, inviting male family members to participate together.

The fun continues with a Kids & Teens Online Summer Session which allows kids ages 5-17 to get moving and stay active on a weekly basis from Saturday, June 5 – Sunday, June 27. Young dancers can learn basic skills during age-appropriate Intro to Hip-Hop and Intro to Ballet classes for ages 5-6; or Hip-Hop 4 Kids and Ballet for Kids classes for ages 8-9. Older children (ages 10-12) can explore different styles during Junior Ballet, Junior Broadway Jazz, Junior Hip-Hop, or Junior Horton classes. Teens (ages 13-17) can work on their skills during Teen Contemporary or Teen Hip-Hop in a judgment-free zone surrounded by their peers. Students are welcome to enroll in the full four-week session or drop-in to one of the weekly classes.

Kids can keep moving from Monday, August 9 – Friday, August 13 when Ailey Experience NYC Online returns to give dancers ages 8-12 and 13+ the opportunity to train and perform in a variety of techniques with celebrated instructors and choreographers. For five days participants around the globe can log in from wherever they are to take class with a diverse roster of accomplished dancers, esteemed instructors, and renowned choreographers. Each day students will practice two techniques before rehearsing choreography to be performed at the end of the week in a digital performance for family and friends. Ailey Experience embodies the diversity of the Ailey dancer while introducing dancers to an exciting world of choreography, creativity, and fun in a non-competitive environment.

Give the gift of dance this season by purchasing a gift card for the graduate in your life. Gift cards make a thoughtful and practical gift for graduates of any age and can also be purchased for birthdays and other special occasions. Ailey Extension gift certificates can be purchased online for any denomination, personalized with a message, and emailed directly to the recipient at a date of your choosing.

With an exciting assortment of classes for Kids & Teens, as well as more than 30 weekly virtual classes for adults (ages 16+), Ailey Extension allows students of all ages and all over the world to explore different dance styles.
