A global call to action

Connected Nation is launching a 25-hour live global event to pursue a Guinness Records for Good title for the longest continuous digital skills workshop and to become the first organization in Kentucky to receive this honor.

Over 25 consecutive hours, live training sessions begin in Louisville, Kentucky, and move westward across time zones as the broadcast follows the sun around the globe. Every session is free and open to anyone, anywhere in the world.

The event streams live beginning at 9 a.m. EST on September 24 and runs continuously for 25 hours, concluding at 10 a.m. EST on September 25, 2026.

OFFICIAL ATTEMPT

A record for good is the official pathway for nonprofits and social impact organizations to pursue world records. An official adjudicator verifies the attempt in real time, and participants receive GUINNESS WORLD RECORDS™ participant certificates. If successful, Connected Nation (CN) aims to become the first organization in Kentucky to achieve a records for good designation.

Who it reaches

A global, multigenerational audience including individuals building foundational digital skills, workers and veterans adapting to a changing economy, parents seeking to protect their families online, older adults looking to stay safe and connected, students and educators, and communities that have historically been underserved by the digital economy.
