More about the summit

This summit will bring together national and international experts in internet infrastructure to explore how Kansas—and America—can lead in the emerging AI economy.

Hosted near the site of Kansas' first carrier-neutral Internet Exchange Point (IXP), being developed by Connected Nation on WSU's campus, the event will highlight the interconnection infrastructure that is needed to reduce network latency, lower costs, and enable smarter connectivity across all sectors — from business and education to healthcare and beyond.

Who is expected to attend?

Approximately 200 state broadband officials, business leaders, industry investors, community changemakers, educational and municipal officials, and others from across the country.
