

2. Look back through your notes and identify similar and differing ideas within your notes. Write down three similarities and one difference below.

3. What conclusions can you draw from your notes, when you consider what information is provided by all of them together? Write down two conclusions below.

4. Identify the most important point, or claim, that you want to make about your subject. Then identify three or four ideas that support this claim. Using these two pieces of information, create a thesis statement about your topic. Write your thesis below.

5. Create summaries for each of your sources. First, copy the title and author (if known) of each of your sources. Then write a summary for each one. Be sure that your summaries focus on the most important points from the source, are written in your own words, and include support for your thesis statement.

---

Summary of Source #1:

---

Summary of Source #2:

---

Summary of Source #3:

---

Summary of Source #4:

---

Summary of Source #5:

---

Summary of Source #6:

A graphic in the bottom right corner of the page showing a white page curling up from a dark purple background.

---

Summary of Source #7:

---

Summary of Source #8: