State Auditor and inspector: The state auditor and inspector work out of this area. Auditors check financial operations of county governments, state agencies, boards and commissions, schools districts, cities and towns, and other public entities.

Secretary of State: The secretary of state and her staff work out of this area. The office is responsible for handling all official acts of the governor, legislation and state questions.

The Betty Price Gallery: The west wing area houses the Oklahoma State Art Collection. The exhibition features more than 100 works of art by artists who were born in, trained in or have produced a significant portion of their work in the state.

Governor’s office: The governor works out of this office. Visitors are encouraged to enter the reception area and sign a guest book. Appointments are necessary to meet with the governor.

State Treasurer’s office: The state treasurer and his staff work out of this area. The treasurer’s office receives, deposits and disburses all state funds and makes investments.

Blue Room: This is an ornate and formal hall that is part of the governor’s office. The governor sees the room for official and commercial bill signings and news conferences.

Legislative Services Bureau: This office serves both the House of Representatives and Senate. A key function is processing legislative measures.

Ethics Commission: This agency is responsible for developing and enforcing rules of ethical conduct for state officials and employees and for candidate and issue campaigns. It also collects campaign reports and handles lobbyist registration and gift-giving reports.

Speaker’s office: The speaker of the House has this office across the hall from the entrance to the front of the House chamber and to the House lounge. The office includes a conference room and a private bathroom.

House of Representatives: The House chamber is on the west wing of the Capitol. The 101 members meet here during the regular sessions, from the first Monday in February to the last Friday in May. Joint sessions with the Senate, such as where the governor presents his State of the State address, are held in this chamber.

House gallery: Spectators can look down on House legislative proceedings from seats in areas surrounding the chamber.

Doctor of the day: Office space is here for the doctor selected to be available for medical services for legislators during the session.

Senate gallery: Spectators can look down on Senate legislative proceedings from seats in areas surrounding the chamber.

Press room: Reporters from The Oklahoman, the Tulsa World and The Associated Press and others work in this area.

Senate Chamber: Where the state’s 48-member Senate meets.

East tunnel: This 650-foot underground passageway from the east side of the Capitol goes underneath North Lincoln Boulevard to parking lots on the east side of the street. Murals on both sides of the tunnel illustrate the state’s six regional areas.

State Election Board: This office is in charge of all elections in the state and oversees the 77 county election boards. It accepts candidate filings for federal, state and judicial positions as well as for the post of district attorney.

First floor

State seal: Stand by the state seal in the center of the Capitol and gaze upward to a stained glass skylight of the state seal on the 155-foot dome.

Speaker of the House: The chairman of the House is the speaker of the House. The speaker’s office is a center of legislative activity. The speaker and the lieutenant governor serve as the presiding officers of the House and Senate, respectively.

Speaker’s office: The speaker of the House has this office across the hall from the entrance to the front of the House chamber and to the House lounge. The office includes a conference room and a private bathroom.

Oklahoma Capitol floor by floor