

THE ROAD WE'RE ON

by AJ Leonard

The full moon on the highway was shining in our eyes
The road was heading northward we'd said our goodbyes
The roadhouse in the darkness a beacon in the night
Love was on the menu it only takes one bite

Bridges burned behind us winds of change ahead
All those years pretending while inside me I was dead
The fall of time reminds us there is no time to lose
Along the road of destiny we always have to choose

There's always something left behind something left to pay
Chasing dreams just always seems to keep the blues away
The bonds that never tie us exposed down to the nerve
Keeping things inside of us the needs we never serve

Once we change the road we're on
The love will turn to hate
The situation changes the lock is on the gate
There's people there with war paint on
The lines are cut and drawn
The phone is off the lights are out
The clothes are on the lawn

The rain comes down in buckets the green is turning grey
This weather dampens spirits it makes me want to pray
The glass upon the hourglass has lost its shine of late
The moon is gone we've broken down nothing to do but wait

We formulate the future on which our life depends
The road goes ever onward but watch out for the bends
The winds of change have carried me here where fortune plays a hand
The hills are steep the valley wide upon the shifting sand

Once we change the road we're on
