

LOS GOUTOS RELEASE MIGHTY

CROSS-CULTURAL ROOTS ROCK FUSION

Some of the most memorable music stands out from beyond the confinements of a single genre.

Los Goutos accomplish this unique feat with Mighty, a sonic melting pot of cultures.

Originally composed of five core multi-instrumentalists, three of them singer-songwriters, the band has expanded to include a fourth singer-songwriter, a two-piece horn section, and sometimes fiddle. The Boston-based quintet fuses Cajun and Mexican musical influences with the instrumentation and rhythms of the Americana genre.

Delivering driving gritty electric guitars and twangy country vocals, the band sets a roots-rock backdrop to Zydeco accordion riffs and horn lines reminiscent of Norteño and Mariachi Music. The memorably-titled “Tequila Set The House on Fire” captivates interest with its incorporation of ska rhythms, and transcends the lyrical simplicity found in some roots music by utilizing metaphors containing dark vivid imagery to depict loss. Other songs such as “Corkscrew” showcase a fun, light and humorous side of the group.

Los Goutos have appeared on The Noise - New England's annual Top 10 releases and were praised by Music Connection Magazine for their artistic creativity. With their new release, Mighty, the band has made strides in delivering a thicker sound than before that captivates attention by drawing on an increasing amount of cultural influences.
