Saskia Laroo’s new single “Bring It Back”, is a dance poppy kind of track with special guest legendary trombonist Joseph Bowie (Defunkt) to help bring this beauty to life.

Saskia Laroo makes her way by cooking up new styles that blend bebop jazz, club, hip-hop, rap, world, and whatever else grooves, in a driving party mix. Her sound is often described as “nu-jazz”; she herself has coined her sound as “body music”. Her sound is borne of her broad musical palette. Its power may be in her down-to-earth perspective; “I want people to have a good time, to dance when I play. I don’t just play for other musicians”.

Laroo makes this magic with the Saskia Laroo Band. Its members are often an international bunch who hail from other lands, are well-versed in many styles, and open to new sounds. Thus, her joy comes to life with this group: some tradition, lots of hipness, groove, ba-ad solos, bold rap vocals, and her mellifluous trumpet leading the way. With all, she freely cooks up the jam.
