

C.N.R.

DROCOURT (PARRY SOUND)

MARCH 20, 1929.

ry to le- Mr. Wh- ind ad- m- He led part ark. the the His mark of ally s of Sub- three ER for Pub- lish- after news and a night ry in rable actor s At- s in- school the to r for million sters	was of wooden construction. This type of car is fitted with a stove, which passengers are allowed to use for preparation of their meals during the long journey from the seaboard to the Prairie Provinces. The interior of these cars is wooden. It is believed that the crash overturned the stove and that the interior of the car took fire from the coals which were spilled out. The passengers, many of them asleep in their berths when the train crashed, were caught without means of escape. Survivors of the wreck recognized the horrible sights which were witnessed by the would-be rescuers. When they reached the colonist car they were forced to stand helplessly by while the trapped passengers screamed with pain as the advancing flames overtook them. A mother and her child sat beside a window of the car, one rescuer stated. They screamed as the flames advanced, but were not rescued. Emergency trains were sent out from divisional points when news of the disaster was flashed out. The injured were placed aboard and rushed to hospital here. Some died en route. All day today and by the light of flares tonight rescue workers toiled to remove the dead from the colonist car. Railway officials, however, admitted the hopelessness of the task confronting the identification of the remains. The official railway statement said that a man, his wife and two children were "believed" to have perished, and noted that "parts of the trunks of four bodies" had been recovered from the colonist car. Miraculous Escape. Apart from the dreadful deaths that came suddenly to those in the fore-part of the train, the passengers escaped miraculously, due possibly to the construction of the cars in the train. After checking up, the railway was able to report that no passengers were killed or injured in the cars of the eastbound express. On the westbound train, members of the train crew and the passengers in the colonist car were the only ones listed as dead or seriously injured. The isolated nature of the scene of the wreck prevented full reports of the wreck being available late tonight. De- pendent is just a station where double	in the sparsely settled section of North country until the arrival of the relief trains from Sudbury and this point. Survivors Work Frantically. The injured were taken aboard the undamaged cars and given every possible aid to lessen their suffering. Survivors worked frantically in the darkness, digging into the masses of twisted steel and snow to extricate those pinned under the splintered wreckage. Most of the passengers were asleep in their berths when the terrific impact came and some were killed instantly. Others died when they were crushed beneath the wreckage, or were burned to death as they cried out for help. Many of the passengers ran about horror-stricken, some with blood pouring from cuts and wounds, as they sought to learn the fate of relatives or friends with whom they had been travelling. Sudbury and Capreol, as well as Parry Sound, sent relief trains. With their arrival the extent of the disaster became better known. The relief crews sought the flames in the colonist car and recovered a dozen bodies, some of them charred almost beyond identification. From the terrible head injuries and mangled bodies of others, it was evident they had met death probably instantly and had been heated by the added torture of flames. One report reaching here stated that perhaps only six persons survived the colonist car death trap. It was also said that an express and baggage car, as well as the colonist car, was burned to a twisted mass of steel. Reports from the hospital train as it pulled in here indicated that many of the survivors, dressed in night attire, went to work uncoupling air hose connections between cars and by main strength of numbers showed the undamaged ones clear of the burning mass. Locomotives Demolished. Both locomotives were demolished, and the baggage car on No. 2 telescoped the colonist car. Fire almost immediately broke out, and it is believed that several of the passengers in the colonist car were only slightly injured by the crash, but were burned to death before they could make their escape. William and J. Fortney of Midway	without lost by day. Part A Part Vicar, dian N lived- on Tr Droves here for Td Railro Hard Wh of Sud- threat of th Baker Slaze. in th are l aboo- round part water quali- ance. Ca owed the The relief ing red day del del del was del del del del
--	--	---	--

Wooden Construction.

The colonist car which caught fire was of wooden construction. This type of car is fitted with a stove, which passengers are allowed to use for preparation of their meals during the long journey from the seaboard to the Prairie Provinces. The interior of these cars is wooden. It is believed that the crash overturned the stove and that the interior of the car took fire from the coals which were spilled out. The passengers, many of them asleep in their berths when the train crashed, were caught without means of escape.

Survivors of the wreck recounted the horrible sights which were witnessed by the would-be rescuers. When they reached the colonist car they were forced to stand helplessly by while the trapped passengers screamed with pain as the advancing flames overtook them. A mother and her child sat beside a window of the car, one rearing and the other screaming as the flames advanced, but were not rescued.

Emergency trains were sent out from divisional points when news of the disaster was flashed out. The injured were placed aboard and rushed to hospitals. Some died en route.

All day today and by the light of flares tonight rescue workers toiled to other than from passengers and members of the train crew, was available in the sparsely settled section of the North country until the arrival of the relief trains from Sudbury and this point.

Survivors Work Frantically.

The injured were taken aboard the undamaged cars and given every possible aid to lessen their suffering. Survivors worked frantically in the darkness, digging into the masses of twisted steel and snow to extricate those pinned under the splintered wreckage.

Most of the passengers were asleep in their berths when the terrific impact came and some were killed instantly. Others died when they were crushed beneath the wreckage, or were burned to death as they cried out for help.

Many of the passengers ran about horror-stricken, some with blood pouring from cuts and wounds, as they sought to learn the fate of relatives or friends with whom they had been travelling.

Sudbury and Capreol, as well as Parry Sound, sent relief trains. With their arrival, the extent of the disaster became better known. The relief crews fought the flames in the colonist car and recovered a dozen bodies, some of them charred almost beyond recognition.

ry
de
in a
fr.
Bnd
at-
to be led
art
ck.
the
the his ack
of sily
of
has ires

Killed
was
train
with
feet
day.
Ferd
Fe
Vical
dies
Neva
are Dred
here
for Nati
H
H
B
of
Had
his
in
are
and red
pat
wa
gul