Chasing Deer have announced their latest single, 'Scared', released 2nd December. The new song features lead singer Rob Hodgkinson's powerful vocals and Rory Evans' versatile guitar playing. The music and lyrics were crafted at London's creative hub, Tileyard Studios, and recorded with producer Paul Whalley. The artwork was created by artist Anita Bagi.

Scared is a vulnerable and emotional anthem for 'everybody feeling frustrated, worried or afraid'. The song has already received an emotional response when performed live, with the inclusion of the relatable line 'everybody gets a little bit scared' broaching the importance of mental health and human connection during the pandemic.

Chasing Deer are well known for their busy live schedule, having performed over 1500 times worldwide, travelling as far as Kenya for a performance to the President in 2018. After winning best UK band at Soundwaves Competition 2019, their tour of the UK, Europe and Los Angeles, gained a nomination from The Association of Independent Music for 'Best Live Act 2020'.

As lockdown began, and with hundreds of bookings cancelled, Rob started up a weekly Facebook live stream, 'Chasing Deer on demand'. It has aired every Wednesday for over 30 weeks, where Scared is already becoming a fan favourite. Rob and Rory have also been performing daily on high streets across the UK, reuniting people with the joy of live music and providing company as well as entertainment for the community.

'Scared' is out 2nd December on all major streaming platforms.

You can find Chasing Deer online at www.chasingdeerband.com with regular live performances on Facebook and Instagram.
