

Just a Dream

Just a dream like the marmalade sky but it's alone and it's puffing on a pipe light feels slickest when its spread out on the floor see it through my eyelids, hear it inside this and the time its sitting on the wall today and I'm right above it but in no real way

The sea feels blue but the sky looks red so i shout like a primate whose lost his head nothing different than that time that you said "think I'm gonna lay low, gonna let my mind grow" and the clock, well, it's faces just melt away while my hands spin round it, keeping time the same

Your voice reminds me of a dream I had years ago forgotten once i woke until just now. and i swear you were there silence falling on the world, feel a gaping void open up to find that your voice inside passed realize quickly that I'm missing something more holes in my pockets thinking that I've lost it and the carpet is a forest for the spiders and ants we dance by the tree trunks just holding hands did that night make you ever think that we were meant to meet to teach me how to love and how to pray?

Well I wonder to this day

Balance swiftly on this log before it falls truth is right behind you the center it reminds you that when you came into this world your eyes were shut closed seems like a while now since i've been home bound and myself its gone now but thats okay So I sit for a while its the end of the day