

Lydia Brownfield

lydia@girlmuse.com

www.lydiabrownfield.com

Singer/songwriter, Lydia Brownfield, spent many years honing her craft in Atlanta, opening for artists such as Loudon Wainwright III, Peter Case, Shawn Mullins and Indigo Girls, as well as playing shows with her band in the area's top clubs.

Before settling in Columbus, Lydia became a regular performer in the coffee houses of Greenwich Village, and began a recording career that has continued to date.

Her songs reflect her experiences of growing up in Columbus, Ohio, her studies at the local fine arts college, a decade of living and performing in Atlanta, touring the south, and then moving to New York City - not least having gone through two difficult divorces and now being a mom. All of which brings a dramatic, energetic and entertaining live show.

Lydia's music influences range widely from folk & alternative country to power pop & punk, and her songs cross many of those same genres but find a comfortable spot among edgy folk/pop artists. Her pure and powerful voice has been compared to Alison Krauss, Sinéad O'Connor and Sheryl Crow. Whether you hear her perform solo on acoustic guitar, accompanied by her partner and guitarist, Jeff Dalrymple, or with her entire band, Lydia is a gifted lyricist showcasing a vast catalog of songs that are thoughtfully crafted and beautifully executed.