

Stephen Lee

Baltimore, MD

Matt Woods (Singer/Songwriter) said

"Stephen has a down to earth and honest way of capturing those moments we all go through and turning them into songs that are destined to stick in your head and rattle around like a ricocheting bullet." (2015)

Pittsburgh City Paper (PA) said

"His music reflects the romanticism and longing of the classic solitary traveling musician, and draws heavily from Americana and outlaw country..." (2016)

The Frederick News-Post (MD) said

"Stephen Lee is the unknown Baltimore version of Chuck Ragan or Tim Barry." (2016)

Biography

Stephen Lee is an Alt. Country, Post-Folk songwriter/performer based out of Baltimore, Md. With the release of his 2013 self-titled "Stephen Lee" EP, Lee began playing out and traveling regionally as a solo act. He works extensively in the Mid-Atlantic and eastern Mid-Western markets performing over 100 concerts annually. Stephen Lee has recorded four EPs (The First Three, collectively re-released), and a full length album, West of Twenty-Three, (Nov 2015). The album and most-recent EP were recorded and released in partnership with Baltimore's OKAY Recordings.

Current Record

West of Twenty-Three was recorded live, with overdubs, at the art collective Reverb Lounge, in Lower Charles Village, during a brief break between tours. Timm Winslow, of the label, engineered the recording, while a troupe of session players including Jon Patton (Midway Fair), Kerra Holtgren (Voodoo Pharmacology) and Sara Stepanik (The ShamRogues) tracked diverse arrangements ranging from the punching kick drum and urgently tempo'ed "One More," to the metered and building "Jet Lag Blues." This is an album that explores evolving genres and progressive sounds but doesn't shy away from its exposed roots. The album is currently available for purchase on iTunes and Amazon, for streaming on Spotify, and of course at StephenLee.bandcamp.com.
