FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

New Song and Gesture Spreading Around the Globe

Katherine C. H. E. and Paul Simon's bass player, Bakithi Kumalo Collaborate

East Hampton Singer/Songwriter, Katherine C. H. E. recently released her new single and video, "Love Five."

The song promotes a loving gesture she calls a "love five."

"You know that heart shape that people make with their hands? It is like that but with two people making the heart together instead of just one. I call it a 'love five' kind of like a 'high five,'" relates C. H. E.

She recorded and co-produced the song with Bakithi Kumalo in his Pennsylvania studio. (Originally from South Africa, Kumalo is best known for his work with Paul Simon, especially the iconic bass solo on "You Can Call Me Al" on the masterpiece Graceland album.)

Over seventy people from all the populated continents on the globe – North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Oceania – participated in her video through images and video snippets of them doing the gesture.

"The videos came in from all over the globe," says C. H. E. "And, some of them were multi-continental themselves. For instance, a Tunisian man who lives in Berlin sent a 'Love Five' from Chile!"

The song's perky, uptempo world beat and positive lyrics promote doing the love five gesture "anytime, anywhere you happen to be."

The "Love Five" single is available for viewing on YouTube, for streaming on Spotify and Apple Music, and for purchase on C. H. E.'s website, iTunes, and Amazon.

Sheet music, downloads, and a free Nashville vacation giveaway are available through C. H. E.'s website: KatherineCHEMusic.com
