JoAnne C. Maffia is an interdisciplinary sound artist (composer/percussionist) and music educator working within the fields of music, theatre, dance and radio. JoAnne's earlier work incorporated social and political commentary addressing issues of race, sexual identity and our consumerist culture. Ms. Maffia's teaching career began with an arts program specifically created for children growing up in the shelter system of NYC. She has consecutively worked as an educator serving racially and economically diverse communities, predominantly, in Brooklyn, NY.
