You made me feel so different

And that made the difference

Now all I feel is insignificant

No words, it hurts

Stop I take a look in the mirror

See her face replace mine

Look close I stare a bit longer

I'm shrinking down in size

You tossed me shook me broke me lost me changed me I ached for what we never were. You tossed me shook me broke me lost me changed me I ached for what we never were I wanted you, you wanted her

It's a competition... We're all victims... I needed to win this time
It's a competition... You're not a victim... Do I really want to win

Been too wired to sleep

But too deprived to weep

I lost the game

Got more than just played

Hurricanes of love and rage

With so much pain what do you gain

You were just saving face

But I'm not full of grace

You tossed me shook me broke me lost me changed me I ached for what we never were: I wanted you, you wanted her

It's a competition... We're all victims... I needed to win this time
It's a competition... You're not a victim... Do I really want to win

I gave you everything I had. I wanted to block out the bad.

What was I competing for? You never wanted more.

You made me feel so different

And now, it's different
