

John P. Flynn

Singer songwriter John Flynn is a seasoned trombone slinger, keyboardist and native New Jerseyan, who has rocked the Northeast in a slew of bands. John's hooks, hot licks, punchy horn blasts and soulful piano bites complement his expressive, honest, and gritty vocal deliveries.

"Heading for the Sun" is John's first studio CD and it highlights nine original songs that range from rock, soul, and ska to funk. Recorded at Lambertville, N.J.-based Thunder Pumpkin Records, the CD showcases a collection of danceable songs with pithy lyrics and rhythms that drive and swing. The respected local talents John Sonntag, Jason Bonthron, Pat McSherry, and Rob Weisenborn sweeten the deal with their contributions of guitar, bass, drums, sax and vocals to this project.

A power horn reggae groove song "Home" kicks off "Heading for the Sun." It's a commentary on how home should be a place of peace, happiness and love, which can't be attained solely from a pursuit of material wealth. "Past Lives" recalls the glory days of the Woodstock generation, while the danceable ska tune "Policeman" tells the whimsical tale of a band of musicians trying to avoid getting tossed in the clink. It may be tough to keep a smile off your face when you hear John's keyboard mimic a siren after he sings, "Policeman, don't take us away ... we're just musicians who play some songs."

John Flynn's breakout record "Heading for the Sun" is sure to find fans among music lovers who seek out original rock, ska, soul and reggae. Throw in clever lyrics, honest sentiments, driving rhythms, and old-fashioned fun and you have all the elements of a stellar debut album.
