

Goodbye

Danielle Schnebelen/Tony Braunagel

Holding ripped photos, cleaning up busted frames
I see the empty walls where our pictures used to hang
Now they're just memories in my head of yesterday
Looking back I wonder, how'd we ever get to be this way

You and I used to laugh, used to dance, we used to try
There was a time we loved each other so much, we both broke down and cried

Nothing could stop us, nothing could do us any harm
Somehow we lost track of what kept us safe and warm

I know it takes time to heal the wounds
When they're made by the ones you love
You don't know if you want to work it out and make it count
Or just give up

I wake up to make you coffee, I remember you're gone
Late at night, in the pale moonlight, this empty house feels so alone
I know we'll never get back what we had I'll stand up and I'll move on even though the memory is so sad

It takes time to heal the wounds, when they're made by the ones you love
Even though we tried to work it out and make it count, we just gave up
I thought we'd be together till we died
Now you just want to say goodbye

So for the last time, Goodbye
