

About your extradition...

by Genevieve Chornenki

Meng Wanzhou,
you of many manifestations, I read your note to netizens*, the one you signed “Sabrina” Your heartfelt prose confounded me Is that how you wish us to see you: Milton’s sprite splashing the Severn grand robes afloat, rippled reflection safely indulging all nature’s perfection?
Bathed in opulence, time as your treasure and savouring books from cover to cover, have you read The Two Michaels by Kovrig and Spavor?

Watching the seasons green, glow, and fade be mindful that you have the power to save.
Hear them, Sabrina, hear them and save glimpse their dejection renounce your reflection advance their protection Hear them and save.

On the steps of the courthouse you change to Guanyin regal demeanor, porcelain skin cupid bow mouth and deftly arched brow Why is it you hid such perfection till now?

Most gracious goddess, mercy your measure do you hear the sighs of the men as they suffer the lonely despairing of Kovrig and Spavor?

Recall what the sutra says about you that one invocation will save a ship’s crew tossing and turning on violent seas.
I beg, Bodhisattva, grant them your favour reverse your direction forego your objection relieve their subjection Hear them and save.
