In your share this week, you are receiving all the fixins' for a batch of salsa! Instead of breaking apart the garlic bulbs and giving you a clove or two for a batch of salsa, you are getting the entire bulb. Using the entire bulb in your salsa might be a little much unless you are seriously trying to ward off vampires. As for the tomatillos, you can use them raw or you can roast them in the oven or on the grill before chopping them into the salsa. I personally enjoy the raw flavor of tomatillos in salsa because they add a citrusy tang! The pepper in the bag with the tomatoes and tomatillos is a Hot Portugal. It is similar in heat to a jalapeno.

The bell peppers are cranking right along this time of the season. Some of the peppers are real beasts, weighing in at over a pound! We enjoyed the peppers stuffed with falafel mixed with onions, eggplant and tomato chunks baked with parmesan on top. These were amazing!!!

Stuffed peppers about to go in the oven.
