

Club 9-Ball is a hard-driving East Coast-based rock band. Paddo Devine, Seamus Devine and Bobby Simmons are members of Club 9-Ball; they just released their debut EP, "Tomorrowland." The Devine brothers had been playing together professionally for three years with the band Someone's Little Brother, headlining shows on the East Coast with their covers of SRV, GNR, Hendrix, Zeppelin, SMKC and more. Bobby Simmons, a trained guitarist, bassist and drummer, joined the Devine brothers in October of 2018, forming Club 9-Ball, committed to writing and performing original rock music.

Paddo Devine (lead guitar and vocals) has been playing since he was 7. Self-taught, his influences include Slash, Stevie Ray Vaughan and Jimmy Page. Although he is a rock guitarist, he has deep roots in the blues.

Seamus Devine (drums) is a self-taught drummer who began playing when he was 7. He idolizes John Bonham, Dave Grohl and Ginger Baker.

Bobby Simmons (bass) is a multi-instrumentalist, playing guitar, bass and percussion. He is the formal musician in the band.
