Bio

Abbie Thomas was born in Bakersfield, CA, but she has since moved over twenty times. A self-avowed nomad, she has adopted Goshen, Indiana as home. Abbie grew up singing in her guitar-playing father's churches with her mother, who once was a trio member with Crystal Gayle. Early musical influences such as The Beatles and Karen Carpenter came from her parents, while far more eclectic influences like Lauren Hill, James Morrison, and even film scores came later.

In 2014, she was discovered at a Nashville photography convention while playing "Sweet Pea," an Amos Lee hit, in a circle of local photographers who were passing around a guitar. After encouragement from industry bookers she played her first open mic in 2018 and immediately silenced the room with her original song, "Try".

Using music as personal therapy, her songwriting became a mission after a series of personal battles gave her lyrics and career intentions a deeper meaning - letting others know they're not alone.

A champion for up-and-coming musicians, venue host Hannah Hoefler raves, "Abbie is a talented musician who is entertaining and connects with you at an authentic and emotional level. A Hoefler House favorite!"

Her biggest highlight so far was to be chosen as an Acorn Theater Singer-Songwriter Contest finalist in the summer of 2019. Her original piano ballad "Fireflies" earned the praises of Grammy winner Jim Peterik ("Eye of the Tiger"). She also had the honor of opening for touring singer-songwriter, Callaghan in October of 2019.

This alto, singer-songwriter artist mixes catchy melodies with hard-hitting, truthful lyrics. She is currently in the studio recording her originals, with plans to release singles through 2020. Her first single, "Those 3 Words", releases on April 10th, 2020 on all major music platforms.
