

Robyn McCorquodale Releases “We Fly Together ... Or We Don’t Fly At All”

January 2021: Vancouver-based singer-pianist-songwriter and international performer, Robyn McCorquodale releases her single and video, We Fly Together or We Don’t Fly at All: an uplifting Pop Anthem that honours seniors and celebrates health care professionals and medical first responders. Inspired by Robyn’s journey as a primary caregiver for her parents, the song was written pre-COVID, though during the recording process, increasingly took on greater significance as the pandemic evolved. With the world in the second wave of the coronavirus, Robyn shares her power ballad, an oath for everyone to unite: We Fly Together or We Don’t Fly at All!

Robyn took a step back from her international performance career in 2015 to support her parents as they transitioned from their home of 55 years, to living independently in a retirement residence, to eventually moving into Long Term Care (LTC) in 2017. She has been actively engaged every step of the way, as an advocate while providing daily support and care.

Robyn releases her song to honour her parents, her life inspiring role models, as well as to honour all seniors; and also to acknowledge the hard-working, brave and compassionate hearts who continue to work on the front line of care, especially within the hardest hit communities of LTC. She is grateful for a meaningful project during a challenging time and is motivated to share her song and her story as a caregiver. Optimistic with the rollout of the vaccine, Robyn believes that now is a critical time for everyone to unite, step up, follow guidelines and do their part in protecting our most vulnerable populations.
