

LIFELINE

© Anouschka Pearlman

This bar sure is empty
'Bout as empty as my heart
But those bottles look like
There's life left in them,
And I got time to talk
You can sit down if you want to,
Throw some conversation my way.
Me, I'm just drinking
Memories of better days

If you're buying, I don't mind trying
Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
I wanna feel that rush of love again
If you're buying, I don't mind trying
Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline

I know beggars can't be choosy
But who's really choosing who?
I mean, we're both sitting here reminded
Of lovers we once knew
Yeah we're, requesting their favorite songs from that bartender,
Yeah we're, watching their ghosts walk through that door,
How come love always starts out so easy,
'Till someone ends up wanting more

If you're buying, I don't mind trying
Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
I wanna feel that rush of love again
If you're buying, I don't mind trying

Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline

When the sun comes up, I swear I'll deal with who I am
But can I rest here on this bar chair until then?

If you're buying, I don't mind trying
Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
I wanna feel that rush of love again
If you're buying, I don't mind trying
Stretching out the truth,
Doing a little denying
To ease the pain
I need to remember the way that he held me,
And if it takes another drink, you could save me
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline
Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline
Pretend that you're him, Pretend that you're him,
Pretend that you're him, Pretend that you're him and throw me a lifeline
