

Concert series returning

BY TERRY O'NEILL
The University of Wisconsin-La Crosse's annual concert series is returning to the campus this fall. The series, which has been a staple of the university's cultural scene for decades, will feature a variety of musical acts and performances.

The first concert in the series will be held on October 15th at the University Center. The featured act will be the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse Symphony Orchestra, which will perform a selection of classical music.

The concert will be held at 7:30 p.m. and is free of charge. Tickets are available at the door. The concert is part of the university's ongoing commitment to providing a high-quality cultural experience for its students and faculty.

The University Center is a multi-purpose facility that provides a central location for many of the university's activities. It is a modern and spacious building that is well-equipped for a variety of events.

The concert series is a popular event that draws a large crowd of students and faculty. It provides an opportunity for the university community to enjoy live music and to support the arts.

The concert series is a key component of the university's cultural programming. It provides a platform for the university's musical ensembles and for visiting artists.

The concert series is a valuable resource for the university community. It provides a chance for students and faculty to engage with the arts and to support the university's cultural mission.

The concert series is a testament to the university's commitment to excellence in education and to the arts. It is a source of pride for the university community and a highlight of the campus calendar.

The University of Wisconsin-La Crosse Symphony Orchestra performs during the annual concert series.