PRESS QUOTES:

The New Yorker: "Loveable!" "Wry, thundering power pop!"

The Village Voice (George Smith): "Glorious, hard pop!"
"Hammering punkarama, namechecking Saul Bellow, Philip K. Dick, and Jerry Lewis." "Horns and guitar drive a tank made of suntanned California riff right out of the speakers."

The Village Voice (Robert Christgau's Consumer Guide): "RATED: A- "Some of the songs are funny, the rest very funny."

Trouser Press (Ira Robbins): "Sardonic adult humor!"
"Winning!" "Hysterical!" "Deadly!"

Time Out New York: "The musical equivalent to Strangers With Candy!"

The Boston Herald: "Nervy, mighty amusing!"
Upcoming reviews in Vice, No Depression, others.

BIO:

A pop/punk/cabaret/metal/rock band with a horn section, this is the debut release from this agnostic octet with hardcore literary and musical cred.

Humorously angst-ridden, audacious, uncomfortably honest diatribes on topics like ennui off I-84, nipples in the summer, mediocrity, stealing your boyfriends' Kenneth Anger and Sun Ra references, getting off anti-depressants once you're in a relationship, being bicoastal, all sung to a ridiculously hook-laden, blasting, horn-driven power pop. 13 original songs with not a loser on the album. Or, well, 8 losers...but...

SOUNDS LIKE:

Liz Phair fronts Weezer with Blood Sweat and Tears on horns. X-Ray Spex meets The Turtles
