

I approach Jesus humbly in two ways - as a warrior Knight and as a broken soul who just wants to touch His cloak. Where do you see yourself? Imagine if Christ was walking down a path and He had many followers. At one point He saw an old man who was terribly crippled from birth. The man had heard of Jesus and wanted to be healed. He reached out in faith and touched Christ's outer garment and was healed. Who do think you are more like? One of His followers or the old man? Me, I see myself as both. I follow Christ because I believe in Him and love Him, but I also am in a fallen state in this world and need healing. Interesting question in my opinion.
