

Templeton Thompson is a singer-songwriter in Nashville and has had songs recorded for platinum selling albums by Reba McEntire, Jo Dee Messina, Sherrie Austin, Little Texas, and many more. In 2003, she embarked on her own independent career as a solo singer. Since then, Templeton has released five studio albums, one holiday EP, a covers album, and a soundtrack album.

The soundtrack album accompanied the documentary film, 7 Clinics with Buck Brannaman. During the recording process of the soundtrack album, Templeton connected with the film's director, award winning, Cindy Meehl. In October 2012, Thompson teamed with Meehl to release a single version of Thompson's original "When I Get That Pony Rode." The video was released along with the single in February 2013. Since the release, the video has went number one on CMT.com. The video also entered GAC's "Daily Countdown" series with host Suzanne Alexander where it charted on the countdown for over two months. The song peaked in the top ten. Since the song did so well for an independent artist, Suzanne had Templeton on the "Daily Countdown" as the show's first guest.

Now, Templeton is back recording a new album of original material. For this project, she is reaching out to fans via the Indiegogo crowd funding platform. I hope that you will join Templeton, and her fans to make this new album possible. If you could take a moment and share the album's campaign page with your followers, Team Templeton would greatly appreciate it.
