In response, staff reported that the contract with Lawson is a not to exceed contract and cannot be altered without both parties agreeing; the lease purchase would be paid in full over a six year period, with annual payments of $650,000 totaling $3.9 million and total cost of the system and implementation would be $4.2 million; an underwriter does not exist at this time because a lease agreement has not been executed; data conversion would take approximately four-hundred hours by a contracted vendor at approximately $65 per hour; and the steering committee or project manager would be responsible for notifying Lawson of any deficiencies in the system, and approximately $400,000 is reserved in a contingency fund for costs generated by deficiencies.
