NOAH

Then God said, "My son, your work's nearly done.
Your humongous ark is strong.
Now search trees and lairs for thousands of pairs
Of creatures to bring along."

Arriving by twos, they walked, crawled, and flew,
The animals, from lions to mice.
When God shut the door at the thunder's roar,
Noah was glad for His advice.

Rain caused great fright forty days and nights,
Flooding low and high.
The waters came down over forest and town,
But the ark stayed snug and dry.

Imagine the hoots and snorts and toots
Of those animals large and small:
The lions that roared, birds and bees that soared,
Our Lord God loved them all.
