Blended Learning: The best of both worlds

Description Twente University had a vision of connecting student, teachers and companies via modern, flexible and attractive online meeting point. Twente envisioned that learning is a social event. By choosing a LMS that can offer a state-of-the-art communication as well as provide a “second-to-none” browser based authoring tool, University of Twente could realize their vision.

Twente quickly identified a key driver for creating a success. Content. Lots of content – fast. Twente divided content into two manageable efforts. First, build a blended learning setup, based upon existing courses, but adding a comprehensive learning functionality core. Second, push the communication between the three main target groups, by utilizing both communities and online groups. As a professor describes: “To follow college colleges and still networking with your colleagues in the public sector. It’s not online or offline: we choose the best of both worlds.”

After only 2 months of implementation, Twente can combine work, private life, and study all in one platform. Accordingly to Twente, the Eureka platform from Mentorix, comes with Blended Learning at your fingertips. In addition, the LMS is a very attractive and effective way of learning – especially with the variety of course creations that includes: games, videos, literature, quizzes, current articles, webinars and integration of live social media events.

The web based LMS technology offered by Mentorix, allows people to study in the train, CEO’s to inspire students, and teachers to do lectures while on road, as the LMS can be used on every single device possible.
