

The University of MOI

Learning is the basic for the human development, and to provide learning to people in need in a place with little infrastructure as an achievement to remember.

Description Eureka was the obvious platform of choice when the University of MOI, Kenya and the Archimedes Institute of Hogeschool Utrecht took the challenge of providing Graduate and Master level education to refugee student (teacher training) in one of Africa's greatest refugee camp. Mentorix, who has experience in this area as well, helped both forming project and provide project management support.

The main challenge was to select a learning platform with the most powerful user friendly interface which could support course building by university teachers with little or no basic knowledge of online learning environments. Often in places with limited internet connection and diminished electrical installations. The technical challenge was to make a great tool for online learning work on limited handheld devices. And still provide inspiring useful learning the refugee students, of whom many suffers from poor learning conditions.

This case illustrates the power of having a LMS that can be configured to operate in less favorable conditions and remote areas while still having the potential of educating thousands of students. Innovative tools inspires teachers to build amazing courses easy and with little or no prior training.

Amount 100.000 € including full SLA for both the full LMS, and ongoing development. Mentorix sponsors the project 40.000 €.
