Interrelationship of building and surroundings:

The Eckersley-Hall School was a neighborhood school, occupying a wedge-shaped site in a historic residential neighborhood of nineteenth-century homes. Since discontinuation of use as a parochial school, the property has been rehabilitated as a senior center. It was individually listed on the State Register of Historic Places in 2010.

Other notable features of building or site:

Eckersley-Hall School, a brick masonry, Georgian Revival-style building (56' x 117'), was completed in 1929. The one-story school has a gabled, parapeted roof and a raised basement. Brick masonry walls, laid in a Flemish bond, have cast-stone quoining at all four corners. The roof is sheathed with the original cement-tile shingles. A brass-domed cupola centered on the ridge (Cunningham 2010).

A WPA mural is located in the former kindergarten room in the southeast corner of the first floor. The mural (5' x 15') was painted with oils on canvas by artist Albert McCutcheon in 1936. The mural depicts realistic portraits of the artist's daughters set against a surreal landscape of the Connecticut River Valley that includes a large elephant, art deco lightning-bolt waves, and lollipop trees.

Architect: Unknown Builder/Maker: Linus Baldwin

Historical or Architectural importance:

For Architectural significance of the building, see Cunningham, 2010 State Register Nomination.

Artist Albert McCutcheon (1901-1990), painter of the mural, was a Middletown native. He attended the Durant School, predecessor of the Eckersley-Hall School. He studied at the Yale School of Fine Arts and in Paris. For a period of several years McCutcheon worked as a free lance easel painter, mural painter, and interior designer. He also worked as an ecclesiastical restorer. During the Great Depression he was employed by the Federal Art Project (FAP) of the Works Progress Administration (WPA). He completed three murals for the FAP.

The surrealistic style of this mural is unusual and creates a fantasy land for its audience of children. A subsequent commission at Woodrow Wilson High School includes more conventional subjects, including historical scenes (Cunningham 2010).
