

Savannah November 26th 58.

How grieved am I dearest Aunt that you have so soon again been called on to yield up another of your heart's treasures - the last of that loving band of Sisters that you so fondly cherished & have so tenderly supported thro' all the trials that have befallen them in their earthly career.

You seemed to be so cheered with the hope of dear Aunt's recovery in your last letter that I was encouraged to believe that she would be spared to the many loving ones around her for a little while longer.

to show to us all how beautiful old age may be, when crowned with a halo of goodness & piety!
What a lovely picture she has bequeathed to her children & grandchildren to contemplate & cherish in their memories! It is a comfort to me to think that I saw her so lately & received her blessing. Oh, my precious Aunt! that I could only be with you now, for you seem dearer to me than ever. Thank dear Julia & Florence for their kind letters.
I received Julia's yesterday whilst in attendance on my husband, who was confined to his bed with one of the severest attacks of neuralgia that he has ever had. he is better today
