expanded in granting subsidies to improve the supply of pure hygienic milk and its products so that all can get benefit at a reasonable cost and keep better health. In good many cases particularly in rural areas eye troubles and night blindness etc., are to a great extent due to the fact that people do not get enough pure milk and butter milk to drink and curd, cream, butter and ghee to eat. Sound eyes is the greatest gift of God. The scourge of some of the serious eye troubles peculiar to Sind (because of extreme heat) can be considerably reduced if the supply of pure milk and its products can be made easily available at cheap rates. Similarly growing children must get ample pure milk and its products for their proper development.

The improvement of milk supply in rural areas can be more easily achieved on a co-operative basis and by providing better facilities for grazing areas for cattle.

(c) ~~GHEE MANUFACTURE AND GHEE INDUSTRY.~~ There is much scope in improving the method of ghee manufacture, and organising the ghee industry properly. Ghee is made as 'Katcha' or 'paeca' and sold as such, but the practice of adulteration in ghee in different ways is very wide spread and it is very difficult to get it in pure condition. Various devices and substances are used in this nefarious practice of adulteration.

Unless stringent laws are made the evil of adulteration will not cease and all efforts to improve the method of ghee making and organising this industry will be practically futile.

In order to manufacture standard types of ghee, it would be better to have collecting centres to collect butter and then turn it into ghee. At present, in the absence of butter ~~xxx~~ collecting centres every individual makes ghee as he thinks best with the result that there is no uniformity in the quality of ghee. On a co-operative basis butter collecting centres can be organised to make standard grades of ghee.
