“The Minor Prophets give us a clear grasp of how God’s chosen servants reacted to the massive political, social and religious changes that swept through Israel and Judea during their lifetimes. We see the devastating effects of corruption eating away the moral fibre of a nation and we are given breathtaking glimpses of God’s sovereignty, His hatred of sin and His amazing love. Carefully read and wisely understood, they act as powerful stabilizers for God’s people today as they face the twenty-first century’s changes and challenges.”

—Dr. John Blanchard

Notes:

> These books are “_____” in size, but not in significance.

> _____ is known about most of these prophets as people.

> These books reflect great _____ of time, personality, setting, experience and background, yet each speaks with unity concerning the nature of God and the plan of God for His people.

2 Peter 1:21

“The two testaments are two lips by which God has spoken to us.” —Thomas Watson

> Jesus _____ many of these prophets during His earthly ministry.

Notes:

“The words the prophet utters are not offered as souvenirs. His speech to the people is not a reminiscence, a report, hearsay. The prophet not only conveys; he reveals. He almost does unto others what God does unto him. In speaking, the prophet reveals God. This is the marvel of a prophet’s work: in his words the invisible God becomes audible. He does not prove or argue. The thought he has to convey is more than language can contain. Divine power bursts in the words. The authority of the prophet is in the Presence his words reveal.”

—Rabbi Abraham Heschel

Notes:

“Reading the prophets can be an unsettling experience. Here we see God’s utter, absolute fury against sin. The graphic accounts of what God is going to do to his own faithless, immoral and complacent people constitute some of the scariest words in all literature.”

—Gene Edward Veith

Joel 2:13

Notes:

“The move from the Old Testament to the New Testament is not a move from a wrathful God to a loving God. Rather the New Testament ratchets up both themes.” —D.A. Carson
