

A Moment with Donna....The Line of Success

How do you define success? How do you measure it? Do you let success, as you perceive it, define who you are?

I discovered, while rummaging through some old files, an article I had saved by a wonderful man who influenced millions. Who is that man? Earl Nightingale. He dedicated his life to helping people understand that the road to success, however one defines it, is never a simple task.

In this article titled 'What is Genius?' he brings up how a very successful business man would go into his office each day wondering how he was going to pay his bills. His friends, knowing the difficulties he faced, encouraged him to quit, walk away from his failing business. However, this businessman wouldn't give up even though he was at the brink of bankruptcy. He kept opening that door to his business. He just wouldn't give up! Then one day an idea came to him and slowly, but surely, he did a turnaround and within less than two years he was prospering beyond his expectations.

Earl said, "People credited with all kinds of ability, talent, brains and know-how, including the ability to see into the future, frequently have nothing more than the courage to keep everlastingly at what they set out to do. They have that one great quality that is worth more than all the rest put together. They simply will not give up. Nobody knows on what day the line of final success is crossed."

We all have dreams we want to realize and perhaps some of them may never come to fruition. Success is an individual perspective. I feel that we have to be true to ourselves and determine what means the most to us. One person I know, who was a very successful manager of a lucrative business, decided he wanted to have more time with family. Success to him is defined by having a comfortable income and spending time with those that he loves in a meaningful way. So he left his management position, taking less pay, and continued working in his field of expertise as a skilled laborer and is very happy.

Sometimes it takes time to realize a dream/desire. It took 20 years to publish my first children's book and another 20 to get the second one done. Book #3 will be forthcoming within the next 6 months and I have a good 17 more publications to go.

What do you desire to reach for? Are you willing to make the necessary commitment to do what needs to be done? Have you taken the time to ask yourself the right questions about what is most important to you? What options do you have to work with? Who can you interact with that will give you the support you need?

Every day is a gift. It is up to us to open that gift and explore not just the world around us, but ourselves, so we can brighten up our lives with enthusiasm and be an example for others to seem so that they too can achieve their dreams/desires for success.

Have a magnificent fall.

October's Chuckle

The native ability females have for confounding their bewildered mates gained new status the other night at the fireside when a young lady-presumably the wife-was overheard earnestly explaining to her male companion: “I know you believe you understand what you think I said; however, I’m not sure you realize that what I think you heard is not what I meant.” ~Author Unknown

To Thine Own Self Be True

Submitted by Mary E., Oregon

You must understand yourself enough to know what you want in life and what desires you believe are worthwhile for your future. You need to depend upon yourself and your talents. Appreciate others for their personal skills and abilities, but always continue to focus on your own strengths and energies.

Life is much too short to spend it worrying about someone else's accomplishments or expecting someone else to be responsible for making your life better.

If you have dreams, then you have a purpose. You have something to believe in and work towards obtaining. Dedicate yourself to yourself. Promise yourself a life filled with love, and then whatever roads you travel will be the roads you want them to be...Author unknown

The Recipe Box...An Indian Dip

Submitted by Deb E., California

Hi Donna! Here is the recipe I talked about to you yesterday - you can pair the cilantro with parsley or mint - I change it up depending on what I feel like eating -or you can use all three - I hope you try it! I also included a video to let you see how it's made and what it looks like! They make it more watery... however, I have used watery whole milk yogurt and don't like it as much as using a thicker yogurt like Greek yogurt.https://www.youtube.com/watch?time\_continue=60&v=-BEZhHGsr4

Ingredients: Cilantro – 15-20 springs, Fresh Mint Leaves (no stalks) – handful or bunch of Parsley (cut off stems), Whole Milk Plain Yogurt – 1 Cup (I use less as I like it thicker), Salt – to taste, Green Chili or several Jalapeno peppers – to taste, Cumin Powder – 1/2 tsp (I use 1/4 tsp), Chaat Masala – 1/4 tsp (I leave this out). Note: This last spice can be found at specialty markets.

Directions: 1. Grind the Cilantro (Coriander leaves), Mint Leaves and Green Chili into a paste with a couple of spoons of Yogurt. 2. Add Yogurt to the Cilantro, Mint & Green Chili paste - I blend everything in my food processor for this step. 3. Add in the Cumin Powder, and Salt. 4. Store in a tight glass container or jar - keeps in fridge for a week.

I use this over eggs, in sandwiches, over meat or in stews! Even over steamed broccoli or baked potatoes!
