Logic is a proper or reasonable way of thinking about or understanding something that involves critical thinking. Logic seeks tangible, visible or audible proof.

Knowledge is information, understanding, or skill that you get from experience or education; it is being aware of something.

Reasoning is thinking about something in a logical, sensible way, but is also subject to personal opinion.

Understanding is the ability to grasp all the factors in any matter to see the issue clearly; comprehending something.

For Christians, wisdom is built on the foundation of logic, knowledge, reason and perhaps most importantly, understanding. It is the ability to know the best response to any situation, to understand (discern) from God’s perspective. Wisdom involves something intangible, something which cannot be gained through knowledge and understanding alone. It is the proper application of knowledge and understanding, and that proper application involves sound judgment in discerning Truth.

For example, this would mean that not only do you understand the calculations the calculator performs for you, and how to make the calculator function, but also when you should and shouldn’t use the calculator. Wisdom allows us to determine that just because we can do something, it doesn’t mean we should.
