In accordance with this role, the Trauma Commission of the ACS (COT) has worked to establish guidelines for the care of injured patients. Consequently, COT sponsors and contributes to the continued development of the Advanced Trauma Life Support (ATLS) Program. The ATLS Student Course does not present new concepts in the field of trauma care; rather, it teaches established treatment methods. A systematic and concise approach to early care for trauma patients is the hallmark of the ATLS Program. This ninth edition was developed for the ACS by members of the ATLS Committee and the ACS COT, other individual fellows of the College, members of the international atls community, and nourgical consultants of the Committee who were selected for their special competence in trauma care and their experience in medical education. (Consult the file at the end of the Preface and in the Acknowledgements section for names and affiliations of these people.) The COT believes that those people in charge of caring for injured patients will find the information extremely valuable. The principles of patient care presented in this manual can also be beneficial for the care of patients with diseases not related to trauma. Injured patients have a wide range of complex problems. The ATLS Student Course presents a concise approach to assessing and managing multiplied injured patients. The course presents suppliers with comprehensive knowledge and techniques and easily adapted to their needs. The skills described in this manual represent a safe way to perform each technique. The ACS acknowledges that there are other acceptable approaches. However, the knowledge and skills taught in the course are easily adapted to all spaces for the care of these patients.
